

Contents

List of Illustrations	ix
Foreword by Sabrina P. Ramet	xi
Preface	xix
Introduction: A Theoretical Understanding of the Transition to Democracy	3
Part I: The Making of a Nation and Political Pluralism	21
<hr/>
1. From a People to a Nation-State	23
2. The Emergence of Political Pluralism	50
Part II: The Actors in Democratic Transition	83
<hr/>
3. Intellectuals and Politics	85
4. The Church and Religion after Communism	101
5. The Radical Right Challenge	117
6. In Lieu of a Conclusion: Toward Democratic Consolidation	137
Appendix: Chronology, 1974–2005	157
Notes	171
References	195
Index	231

Illustrations

Photographs (following page 49)

All photos courtesy of the University of Ljubljana

Anton Korošec (1872–1940)

Josip Broz Tito (1892–1980)

Edvard Kardelj (1910–79)

Milovan Djilas (1911–95)

Stane Kavčič (1919–87)

Milan Kučan (1941–)

Slobodan Milošević (1941–)

Janez Drnovšek (1950–)

Tables

1.1. Relationship of Slovenia to European Macroregions and States in the Modern Era	30
1.2. Yugoslavia's Main Ethnonational Groups, 1921–81	32
1.3. Allegiance and Attitude of the Republics toward Political Pluralism, 1989	41
1.4. Continuum from a Centralist to a Pluralist Arrangement, 1989	43
2.1. Comparison of Slovenian Parliamentary Electoral Results from 1990 to 2004	77
4.1. Rating of Selected Countries According to Degree of Religiosity	109
6.1. Nations in Transit: 2003 Democratization Rankings	145
6.2. International Comparison of Per Capita GDP in 2003	150